GAMM vote next week

Bethel voters will hold special Town Meeting a week from today, Wednesday, April 8, to decide the fate of the former GAMM II building, as well as act on a number of other matters.

The major development of the past week in the GAMM situation was the decision by the Airport Industrial Park Committee to support the first article on the recent petition calling for the town to sell the building.

Committee members now say the article will enable them to negotiate to sell, as well as lease, the property, but that the wording of the article does not compel them to sell the property to someone who does not intend to create jobs for the local community.

The committee, however, is recommending against the second article on the petition, which calls for the town not to accept the Industrial Development Grant. Town officials hope the grant will underwrite much or all of the purchase price.

Residents opposed to the GAMM project have argued that the real cost to the town has been underestimated, that the town is unlikely to find a suitable leasee for the property, and that in any case the town should not be in position of competing with private businesses that might be interested in the property.

The debate continues on this week's Opinion page.

Also on the Opinion page, Town Manager Madeleine Henley discusses the remaining articles on the warrant for next week's meeting. The Citizen will take a closer look at the articles next week.

Overflight hearing Thurs.

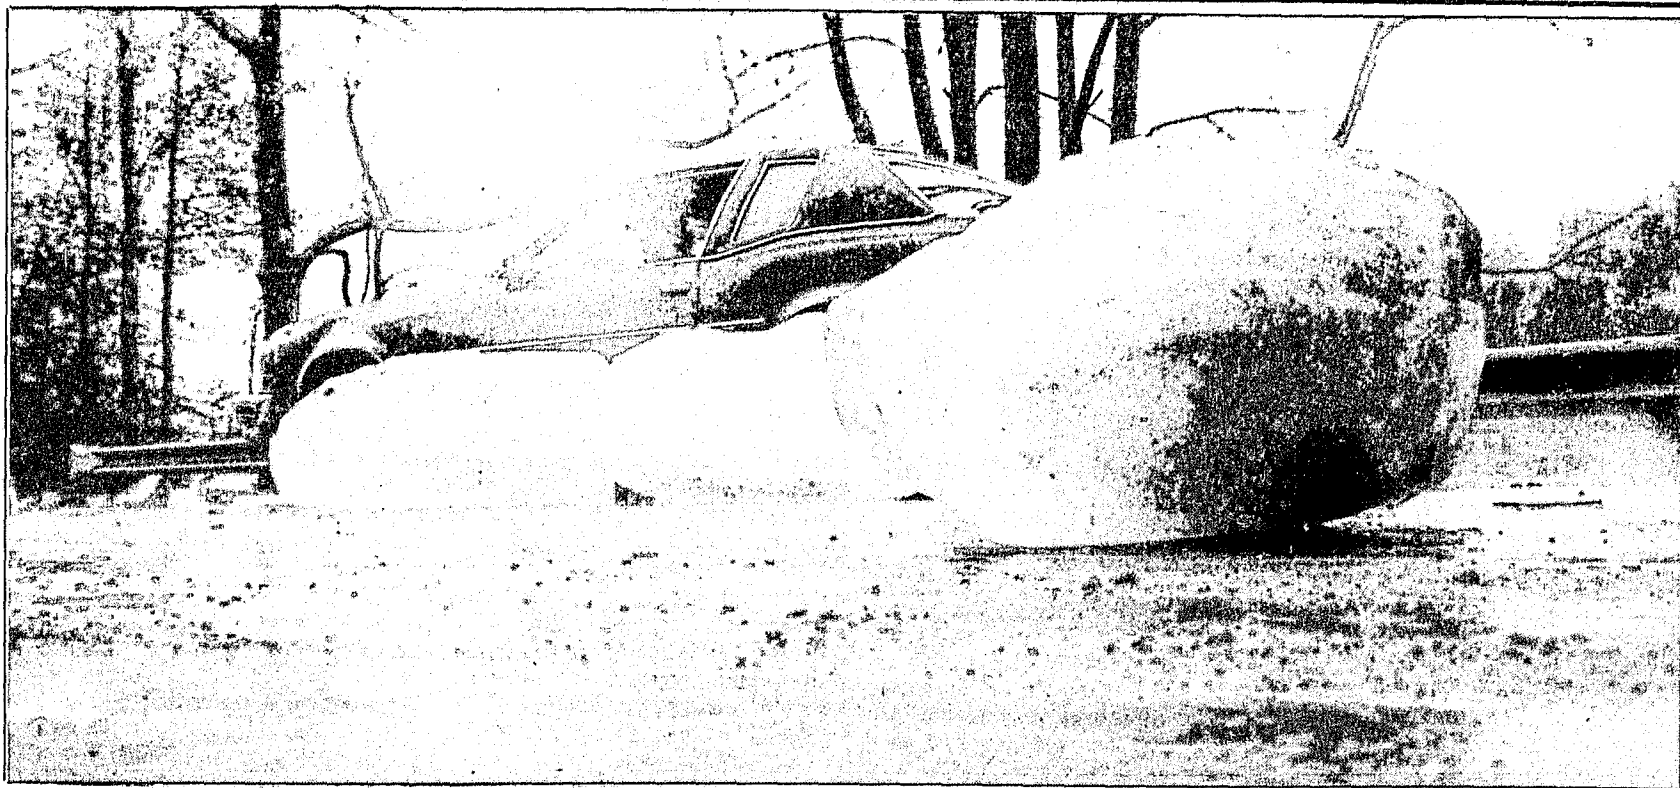

The Air National Guard will hold a public hearing tomorrow, Thursday, April 2, in Mexico, on the Draft Environmental Impact Statement supporting its plan to lower the operations floor in the Condor Military Operations Area, which overlies much of western Maine, including the SAD #44 area.

Military operations in Condor are now limited to altitudes between 7,000 and 18,000 feet. The Guard wants to lower the operations floor to 300 feet, in order to accommodate the training needs of F-16 squadrons slated to begin operating out of bases in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

The plan has some local supporters, but it has been opposed by many residents who feel the low, and noisy, overflights threaten the quality of life in rural Maine and could harm tourism.

The Maine Congressional delegation in Washington has also opposed the lower overflights, and on page three this week, U.S. Rep. Olympia Snowe makes her case against the Guard proposal. Also on page three, The Rural Alliance for Military Accountability raises a number of technical questions regarding the safety of the lower overflights.

Tomorrow's public hearing will be held at the Mountain Valley Middle School, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

LURC will hold Bethel hearing on skiway's rezoning request

Sunday River sees lodge complex in Riley

By MICHAEL DANIELS

In response to a request by a number of local people, the Maine Land Use Regulation Commission has scheduled a public hearing for April 23 on Sunday River Ski Resort's request to have 275 acres of Riley Township rezoned for general and commercial industrial development.

LURC project analyst David Allen said approximately 20 people, most of them local, had intervened seeking the hearing. He said such public hearing as not unusual with rezoning applications.

Riley resident Rockie Graham, one of those seeking the hearing, said there was no formal opposition yet to the skiway's plans, but a number of people wanted more information about the proposal.

So do the Newry selectmen and the Oxford County Commissioners.

At the skiway's request, the Newry selectmen have agreed to write to LURC in support of the rezoning proposal, according to head selectmen Steve Wight. But the selectmen are stipulating that they want more information on the plan, especially regarding traffic impact, solid waste disposal, required town services and water needs for snow making.

The skiway also sought a letter of support from the Oxford County Commissioner. But at their most recent meeting the commissioners declined, also citing the need for more information on solid waste and police services.

County Administrative Assistant Carole Mahoney said the commissioners plan to wait until after the April 23 hearing before deciding whether they will support the request.

The 275 acres Sunday River is currently seeking to have rezoned are in the middle of 1150 total acres owned by the skiway in Riley.

The land is currently zoned as a general management subdistrict, which allows for recreational uses such as ski lifts and trails, but not for the construction of support facilities such as lodges, equipment buildings and residential housing units.

LURC's Allen said the skiway had originally requested that all 1150 of its acres in Riley be rezoned, and had later lowered the number to 364, then 275. "They originally wanted to do the whole parcel," Allen said, "but we asked them to tell us what they really needed."

The skiway is seeking the change in order to clear the way for continued expansion of its lift and trail network, and for new condominium and single family housing construction.

The expansion, projected to cost $14 million, will include 72 trails and 10 new chairlifts. If carried to completion, it would roughly double the size of Sunday River's current lift and trail network.

The first phase of the expansion, which calls for the construction of 23 trails and four lifts, has already been approved by LURC and by the Maine Department of Environmental Protection.

The area approved for new lifts and trails is approximately one-half mile away from the area Sunday

Rain ends season at Ski Mt. Abram

Mt. Abram Ski Area closed for the season on Sunday, March 29.

Weekend rain shut down the ski area three days earlier than Wednesday's planned closing, according to Carol Welsh, director of skier relations.

"The rain was pretty heavy, the snow pretty soft and we couldn't get the grooming machines on the slopes Saturday," she said. "It wasn't worth opening up again for three days."

Skier visits rebounded by 5 percent this season, Welsh said. "We had a good season. People were pleased with our prices and we plan to be back next year in early December."

School directors make own cut list

By WENDY HANSCOM

The SAD #44 board of directors last week abandoned the administration's FY '93 budget cut proposals and began trimming the budget themselves.

The budget outline is still preliminary. Any or all of the budget cuts proposed last week could change before the board eventually signs the warrant for the annual district meeting. Another budget workshop is scheduled for Thursday night.

In search of a place to start cutting, the board tallied up what it would cost to keep all the staff and programs the district has now. That figure came to $6,127,756 or $226,145 more than last year's total budget of $5,901,611 (see box regarding town assessments).

The move would jump the local assessment to $3,378,604 or $310,517 more than last year.

No board member said he or she was willing to pass the whole amount on to taxpayers, so the directors began whittling away at the budget.

The board tentatively agreed last week to do away with the high and middle school music programs, the elementary art program and half an elementary physical education teacher. The programs would be replaced with an artists-in-residence program, and would reduce spending by $57,271.

The proposal to switch to an artists-in-residence program came from Superintendent Dewaine Craig. He had also suggested eliminating elementary music.

The district's three elementary school principals, however, asked if the money allotted to them for the new program could be used instead

Annual Town Meetings

Woodstock OKs dog regs and highway equipment

By WENDY HANSCOM

Woodstock voters wrapped up the local Town Meeting season at around 10 p.m. Monday night.

During the long, but agreeable, meeting, voters approved a new dog ordinance, the purchase of highway equipment and the formation of a committee to draft a noise control ordinance.

Selectmen and animal control officer Marsha McKenna urged voters to pass the new dog ordinance.

A nearly identical ordinance was defeated at neighboring Greenwood's Town Meeting.

McKenna argued that the ordinance would allow her to do her job more effectively. She pointed out that the only dog ordinances in the town pertained to barking and unlicensed dogs, and dogs running at large.

The new ordinance establishes fines for barking and howling dogs and dogs which habitually bite and chase.

It also limits the number of dogs a homeowner can have without a kennel permit to three.

McKenna said kennel permits would apply to people who have hunting dogs or are dog breeders.

"If you just love dogs," asked an audience member, "you can't have four dogs?" McKenna replied "no."

However, when the 110 residents in the audience were asked to raise their hands if they owned more than three dogs, no hands were raised.

Town Manager Vern Maxfield stressed that if the ordinance was in place last year, the town could have saved some of the $1,000 in legal expenses spent prosecuting just one dog case.

The ordinance was overwhelmingly approved.

Voters also approved a change in the town's setback ordinance, from 20 feet to 10 feet.

Appeals board chairman Victor Young said under the town's current ordinance, anyone who wants to build anything within 20 feet of their neighbor's property has to be granted a variance.

Tax assessor Gary Wing said the

Riley residents really riled

Secessionists demand: 'Jus BeCoos'

More than 200 voters turned up for the first annual Town Meeting in Riley township—astounding town fathers... and mothers.

"The last census said we didn't even have enough folks in town to form a quorum," said selectperson Rockie Graham. "Shows you how much those bureaucrats in Washington know."

Observers attributed the high turnout to rumors that a casting agent from Northern Exposure was in the area scouting "characters" for the popular TV series, set in an Alaskan outback much like Riley.

If a Hollywood agent was indeed in the audience, the voters did not disappoint him.

"I haven't seen this many locals crawl out of the bushes since them BIDE helicopters came over last summer," said long-time resident Bingo Green.

The hottest item on the agenda was a petition to secede from Oxford County and reincorporate as part of New Hampshire.

The so-called "Jus BeCoos" movement had strong support.

"New Hampshire is desperate to annex us," said Selectman at Lodge Horst Schuesse. "Them North Country shopkeepers are wetting their polypropylene britches worrying about all the market share their ski areas are losing to Sunday River."

"But now they know which way the mountain is moving and they want to be here waiting for it when it gets here."

Jus BeCoos also gained momentum recently when rumors began circulating about a pending

Opinions

See for yourself

Bethel's Airport Industrial Park Committee will hold an open house Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the former GAMM II property off the Northwest Bethel Road.

We urge all residents to drop by and see for themselves what the town has bought into. But we especially urge those voters whose opinions on the matter are not yet set in stone to come to the open house, check the building out, and talk with the committee members—and with opponents of the project—and then form their own opinion on the merits of the town's continued ownership and management of the property.

The committee members believe that when all the facts are known, voters will decide to keep all the town's options open. Opponents of the project think voters will decide otherwise.

We trust that responsible voters will make the effort to see for themselves, think for themselves—and then show up next Thursday to cast their ballots.

Letters to the Editor:

AIRPORT COMMITTEE VIEW

To the Editor:

As members of the Bethel Airport Industrial Park Committee, we would like to ask our fellow citizens to attend the Special Town Meeting on Wednesday, April 8, at Telstar High School. The future of the Bethel Industrial Building, formerly occupied by GAMM II, will be under consideration by voters at that time.

After nearly three months of working on this economic development project in hopes of creating jobs for the area, we are beginning to see our efforts bear fruit, in the form of inquiries and anticipated proposals from businesses interested in the building. We are hopeful that the voters at the Special Town Meeting will help in this project by making decisions which will allow the Town of Bethel the most options in achieving the goal of job creation.

To that end, we urge that voters vote "Yes" on Article 2, which will give the Board of Selectmen authority to sell the building. The Selectmen already have authority to lease the property, and this article would allow a sale option without returning to the town meeting. We are supporting this article with the understanding that it would not force sale under circumstances which would not create jobs. This authority would greatly enhance our ability to negotiate with prospective buyers and would allow the Town to maximize options available in attracting an occupant who will create jobs.

We urge that voters vote "No" on Article 3, which would direct the town to refuse the Farmers Home Administration Industrial Development Grant. This grant program has the same goal as do the Selectmen and the Industrial Park Committee—the retention and creation of jobs. Our chances for receiving the grant to cover the costs of acquiring the building seem very good. The grant will remove financial risk from the taxpayers of Bethel and allow our committee to take sufficient time in soliciting and evaluating proposals to insure that we secure the best possible occupant for the property. A "No" vote will not necessarily mean that the grant will be accepted; but it will preserve the option of accepting it should it appear to be the best option once an award is made. Again, we will keep our options open for a brighter economic future for the area.

Anyone interested in visiting the Bethel Industrial Building is invited to come to the Open House on Saturday, April 4, at the Industrial Park. There will also be an opportunity to view the building on Wednesday, April 8, prior to the Town Meeting, from 6 to 6:30 p.m. We would welcome calls from anyone with questions about the project.

OF RED HERRINGS AND COOKIE JARS

To the Editor:

Let's get one red herring out of the way. The Central Maine Power expense at the GAMM II building is not an issue. The town of Bethel is not, nor was it ever, responsible for the three-phase power going to the property. An important point, however, and one which must be disclosed to any potential buyer, is that 100 out of every 100 industrial buildings require industrial power, i.e. three phase. This, as even the town admits, is expensive as CMP demands a hefty "contribution" up front in addition to an operation and maintenance fee of several hundred dollars per month.

In other words, any buyer foolish enough to lease the GAMM II property is going to have to pay one hell of a lot more than $1.50 per square foot to lease it. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to add up the cost of doing business under a triple net lease.

The town has made an awful mistake at the expense of the taxpayer and is now trying to get out of it through obfuscation and distortion. The town mentions the Cole Block and the airport as examples of its experience as landlord and developer. The Cole Block was given to the town for $1; the airport land, which was also given to the town, remains unsold after years and years of town ownership. To date, the town doesn't even know how much the land can be sold for, nor has it any information whatsoever to give to a potential buyer; the auction, held some two or three years ago, has never been resolved.

The town has gotten caught with its hand in the cookie jar. Rather than admit it made a mistake trying to wheel and deal in the highly speculative real estate market, it now seeks to justify itself by applying for a grant that some other group of taxpayers must shoulder.

Sounds like the federal government, doesn't it?

Let's not forget that the town has already turned down a well qualified buyer who would have brought 30 or more jobs to the area. That it doesn't know what it is doing is obvious; that it should try to convince Bethel residents of the opposite is wrong.

A week or so prior to the Dec. 26, 1991 special town meeting, I showed the GAMM II property to an interested buyer. Her husband sits on the Bethel Board of Selectmen; she herself now is a member of the Airport Industrial Park Committee. This conflict of interest has never been disclosed to anyone.

GET OUT AND VOTE

To the Editor:

I would like to urge all taxpayers to attend the April 8 special Town Meeting.

You will be considering two articles regarding the Bethel Industrial Building (GAMM II).

There was an extremely close vote at the Dec. 26 town meeting regarding the building.

A great amount of effort has gone into giving the voters a chance to

WEARY OF THE PROCESS—Ironing out the SAD #44 budget for FY '93 has been a long, laborious task of proposals rejected and rhetorical rehash. GAMM AS SCHOOLHOUSE?

To the Editor:

I am a taxpayer in the town of Bethel. I also have children in CPS and in Middle School.

With the dilemma of what to do with GAMM II, and CPS wanting to build a new school, why can't we combine the two, putting the upper grades at GAMM II and the lower grades at CPS? We all want quality education for our children, and taxpayers are feeling the burden. I can't see how we can build a new school and cut teachers at the same time.

Although the town already owns GAMM II, I realize there would have to be zoning changes and some inside building.

Is this really improbable?

DON'T CUT FROM KIDS

To the Editor:

I wish to respond to the letter of March 25 by Donna Fyberg.

I will begin by saying I agree with her completely that the Andover school should be left alone. There are several reasons for this and I will list a few.

Some of the readers of this letter will remember a few years ago I helped protest a proposed "Professional Development Day" in SAD #44. While researching for one of my appeals to the school board I discovered that there is a state law dictating the number of hours minimum that children must be taught per week. SAD #44 students were being given that minimum, but what was interesting was that the hours were averaged between Woodstock, Bethel and Andover. The children in each of the three schools did not receive the same amount of time in class. The Bethel children got the least time, the Woodstock children a little more and the Andover children got the most teaching time. Had I stayed in that district I would've wanted my son going to Andover. I am not sure, but I believe the Andover school also has a better student to teacher ratio than the other schools. These two factors are very important and can be easily checked by calling the school principals.

If the situations are as I stated, then it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that a smaller class with more classroom time stands a better chance of learning than a larger class with less time. Leave Andover alone because it works unless someone has test scores to show otherwise, which I doubt.

Donna also asked about administration costs compared to instruction. Consult with the Bethel Citizen back issues (1988 or 1989 I think) for an article comparing SAD #44 costs with the rest of the state. The cost of administration was above state average and the cost of instruction was at or below state average. I know where I would look for budget cuts.

Lastly there is one thing that bothers me immensely and that is when adults put their wants and needs ahead of those of the children. I find that selfish, greedy and offensive. If you cut teachers you hurt children unless the teachers have no children to teach. If you keep an adult education program going and cut teaching positions you are saying the re-education or vocational training of adults is more important than the primary education of the children.

Don't get me wrong, I am not against adult ed if the district can afford it, but if the district has to cut one teaching position instead of an adult ed administration position then it can't afford it and the adults should be ashamed of themselves for depriving the children in order to improve themselves or worse take up a hobby.

It is and always will be my belief that a school system is for the children first and all others second and that should always be in the forefront of the minds of all school board members at budget time. I've heard Oxford Hills has O.U.I. offenders cleaning their school on weekends as punishment. That could be a money saver.

One final thing, Donna. Take a few minutes and call Dewaine Craig, the superintendent and find out how much adult ed costs the district. He's hard to get exact figures from, but if you keep after him you can find out exactly how much the district provides and how much is state funding. You'll probably be surprised.

NO NEW TAXES

To the Editor:

Some seem to think we should have a raise in taxes instead of cutting the budget so much.

Well, as to where to cut the budget may be a problem, but many of us just cannot stand any increase in our taxes.

We have always paid our taxes but we will not be able to do so if there is any increase.

We are on Social Security and our last tax bill it took both checks for a month to pay them.

By the list of unpaid taxes it seems there are a lot in the same boat. It would seem that an increase in taxes would just add to this list and not give more money for the town to spend.

If you must have so much money, better find some other way to raise it than property taxes.

REMEMBERING MARGARET HERRICK OAKES

To the Editor:

On March 23, the Bethel Historical Society lost one of its most memorable members with the death of Margaret Herrick Oakes. I did not know her until she was past 80, but even at that age despite her deafness and arthritis, I was immediately taken with her wit and humor. She was a remarkable storyteller; her keen mind had an incredible capacity for detail; I never tired of hearing her tell of the Bethel she had known as a child growing up on Broad Street.

Her father was Judge Addison E. Herrick, born in Greenwood, but raised in Bethel. Her mother was Mary Chase of Blue Hill. In 1885, they built the Queen Anne style house on Broad Street now owned and occupied by Bob and Sue Crane. It was here that Margaret and her older sister were born.

Mrs. Oakes recalled roaming all over Broad Street and beyond in the early years of this century. She spent so much time in all of the Broad Street residences that her mother said that nearly all the neighbors had a hand in raising her.

Margaret was a keen observer of Bethel and its people; she vividly recalled in her letters and tape recordings what the town was like in the years prior to World War I.

The Herrick family always had the best of books; they read widely and constantly, appreciated fine art and music, yet were not conceited or pretentious. They could hold up to Mrs. Gehring's standards of culture and refinement very well without the haughty and grand manner she exercised so freely in Bethel.

In fact Mrs. Oakes once recalled that Mrs. Gehring's sister Mary True (who had been a remarkable teacher of the deaf, counting among her students the wife of Alexander Graham Bell) cooked up a huge pot of Irish stew and her distinguished guests filed through the kitchen, served themselves and sat around eating. Margaret recalled her mother saying that she never heard more brilliant conversation anywhere. This informality would hardly have been permitted in Mrs. Gehring's household.

Another Broad Street resident must have also served as a lifelong model for Margaret Oakes. That was Mary True's brother, a Civil War

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

All members and friends of the Bethel Historical Society are reminded that the next monthly meeting will be held on Thursday, April 2, in the meeting room of the Dr. Moses Mason House, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Featured speaker for the evening will be Dr. Ernest Cassara, who will make a presentation on the Salem witchcraft trials. Anyone interested in this program is cordially invited to attend.

Margaret Herrick Oakes, who died last week, provided the Society with many of her memories of Broad Street in Bethel, where she grew up at the turn of the century. She recalled William O. Straw, who lived where the Bethel Inn's Elms is today:

Mr. Straw was very fond of me and I of him. Once I told him what I thought of Democrats. I was down in his cellar sucking sweet cider out of a bung hole in a barrel with a straw, and something came up about the September election and I hauled off and let him have it with what my father had said about Democrats. Mr. Straw was about rolling in the aisles, and I couldn't understand it. When I came home and said, "Papa, I told Mr. Straw what you said about Democrats," my father collapsed and laughed until he cried. When I asked him what was the matter, he said, "Straw's one of the strongest Democrats in Bethel."

Of William Bingham II, she remembered:

I knew Mr. Bingham well; I used to love to walk with him. You see, until it appeared in the Boston papers that he was the richest man in Maine, he lived just like anybody else.

These are but a couple of the memories that Mrs. Oakes provided the Society. Her humor, grasp of detail, and genuine interest in people will be remembered for years to come.

The following comments have been prepared for Military Responsibility, a Nevada based Air National Guard's plan to lower the op-

MOA. Deletions, largely of technical or repetitive nature, are indicated by asterisks. A copy of the complete document is in The Citizen's office.

AIRSPACE

The DEIS (Draft Environmental Impact Statement) failed to describe completely the operational details of the proposed flight profile that include access/egress and activity within the airspace. The DEIS failed to provide adequate information on scheduling procedures of the current airspace which ensure compatible use of shared low altitude airspace. The DEIS assumes a constant throttle and altitude of flights. There is no mention of radar avoidance maneuvers on approach, escape maneuvers, etc.

ACCIDENTS

The DEIS fails to provide information on all possible ordinance types which the aircraft may be carrying.

The recent night crashes of two stealth bombers have been partly attributed to jet pilot fatigue. What measures will be taken to assure that fatigued pilots do not fly, thereby greatly increasing the accident potential for such training activities? What is the increased accident potential on this proposed flight corridor during bad weather overflights?

The DEIS provides no information on the potential for "startle" related accidents while driving. Recently a federal judge ordered government payment of $342,000 in damages to Leslie Brunch after she was buzzed and driven off the road by a military aircraft on July 6, 1988. She suffered a miscarriage and four broken ribs (Las Vegas Review Journal, Oct. 6, 1991). The DEIS failed to provide information on who is responsible. Could State and local government agencies be held responsible? What are the emergency response capabilities within the region?

NOISE

The "levelized" Ldn measurement mean nothing to people hearing jet noise as they attempt to talk to friends, enjoy an outdoor barbecue or watch TV. People experience noise episodes, not day/night averages! It is also important to acknowledge that even at a decibel level of 55 or less, jet noise intrudes into the human environment, particularly in rural areas where ambient noise levels are exceptionally low, obliterating the sense of peace and quiet that attracts people to such areas. These factors have not been adequately considered in the DEIS.

Subsonic aircraft at very high speeds at low altitude can cause sonic booms (Aircraft Noise in a Modern Society, NATO 1989). Sonic booms created by subsonic low flying aircraft were not addressed in the DEIS.

The DEIS did not analyze the difference in noise level for both winter and summer months. In the case of nighttime operations there will be a difference in the threshold interference for window opened conditions.

The DEIS does not provide noise contours or footprints to display the cumulative noise exposures. Nor does the DEIS compare the noise footprints of the individual aircraft.

WEEK AT THE

esses Mason House

Members and friends of the Historical Society are invited to the next monthly meeting which will be held on Thursday, April 2, in the meeting room of the Moses Mason House, beginning at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Dr. Ernest Cassara, who will give a presentation on the Salem witch trials. Anyone interested in the program is cordially invited to attend.

Garet Herrick Oakes, who died in 1986, provided the Society with a collection of her memories of Broad Street in Bethel, where she grew up. She was born in 1901 and died in 1986. She was the daughter of William O. Straw, who was the owner of the Bethel Inn's Elms in the 1920s.

Straw was very fond of me. Once I told him what I was doing. I was down cellar sucking sweet cider out of a hole in a barrel with a pump and something came up about the election and I hauled him over to the house and I had said about Democrats. Straw was about rolling in the street and I couldn't understand it. He came home and said, "Papa, Mr. Straw what you said Democrats," my father said and laughed until he cried. I asked him what was the matter. He said, "Straw's one of the best Democrats in Bethel."

William Bingham II, she remembered; I used to walk with him. You see, it appeared in the Boston Globe that he was the richest man in the world. He lived just like anybody else.

There are but a couple of the stories that Mrs. Oakes provided. Her humor, grasp of the situation and genuine interest in people are remembered for years to come.

Are low-level overflights safe, necessary?

The following comments have been prepared by The Rural Alliance for Military Responsibility, a Nevada based group, in response to the Air National Guard's plan to lower the operations floor in Condor MOA.

Deletions, largely of technical or repetitive material, are indicated by asterisks. A copy of the complete document is available for review in The Citizen office.

AIRSPACE

The DEIS (Draft Environmental Impact Statement) failed to describe completely the operational details of the proposed flight profile that include access/egress and activity within the airspace. The DEIS failed to provide adequate information on scheduling procedures of the current airspace which ensure compatible use of shared low altitude airspace. The DEIS assumes a constant throttle and altitude of flights. There is no mention of radar avoidance maneuvers on approach, escape maneuvers, etc.

ACCIDENTS

The DEIS fails to provide information on all possible ordnance types which the aircraft may be carrying.

The recent night crashes of two stealth bombers have been partly attributed to jet pilot fatigue. What measures will be taken to assure that fatigued pilots do not fly, thereby potentially increasing the accident potential for such training activities? What is the increased accident potential on this proposed flight corridor during bad weather overflights?

The DEIS provides no information on the potential for "startle" related accidents while driving. Recently a federal judge ordered government payment of $342,000 in damages to Leslie Brunch after she was buzzed and driven off the road by a military aircraft on July 6, 1988. She suffered a miscarriage and four broken ribs (Las Vegas Review Journal, Oct. 6, 1991). The DEIS failed to provide information on who is responsible. Could State and local government agencies be held responsible? What are the emergency response capabilities within the region?

NOISE

The "levelized" Ldn. measurement mean nothing to people hearing jet noise as they attempt to talk to friends, enjoy an outdoor barbecue or watch TV. People experience noise episodes, not day/night averages! It is also important to acknowledge that even at a decibel level of 55 or less, jet noise intrudes into the human environment, particularly in rural areas where ambient noise levels are exceptionally low, obliterating the sense of peace and quiet that attracts people to such areas. These factors have not been adequately considered in the DEIS.

Subsonic aircraft at very high speeds at low altitude can cause sonic booms (Aircraft Noise in a Modern Society, NATO 1989). Sonic booms created by subsonic low flying aircraft were not addressed in the DEIS.

The DEIS did not analyze the difference in noise level for both winter and summer months. In the case of nighttime operations there will be a difference in the threshold interference for window opened conditions.

The DEIS does not provide noise contours or footprints to display the cumulative noise exposures. Nor does the DEIS compare the noise footprints of the individual aircraft.

HERO

The DEIS failed to discuss that the F-16 aircraft are dangerously vulnerable to HERO (Hazard of Electromagnetic Radiation to Ordnance). In fly-by-wire incidents, unexpected electromagnetic interference (EMI) either from the aircraft own electronics such as radio or radar systems or from civilian or military external sources can overpower the electronic flight control systems, thus causing the pilot to lose control and crash.

HEALTH IMPACTS

Do findings in the DEIS reflect findings by the Air Force in the Generic Environmental Impact Statement (GEIS) for Air Force Low Altitude Flying Operations, Preliminary Draft, Jan. 1990, Volume 1? The GEIS found that between 25 percent and 40 percent of the respondents reported being highly annoyed by low level overflights (page 4-18). These percentages are higher than the normally calculated 20 percent. The GEIS also found that one-fifth of the respondents beneath the case study airspaces reported either sleep interruption or interruption of three or more non sleep activities (page 4-21). What is the expected increase in sleep disturbance?

The GEIS also stated on page 4-36, "Further, field data collected as part of the GEIS for the 11 case study sites indicate that actual levels of annoyance with aircraft several hours.

Impacts to wildlife and domestic animals of laser operations should be supplied. Impacts of a laser aimed above the horizon were not addressed. Records of past accidents involving the use of lasers was not supplied.

Specular reflections—mirror-like reflections of laser energy from very smooth, flat highly polished surfaces such as mirrors, windows, polished metal and calm standing water—should be treated as if they were the direct laser beam, according to the Navy document. Even the reflections from a curved specular surfaces such as glass bottles or car bumpers can cause damage, even though their range of danger is smaller. Indeed, one of the most serious eye injuries incurred from laser radiation in the Navy occurred from a specular reflection from a glass bottle. One can easily imagine the likelihood of similar injuries from unintentional exposure.

HEALTH-CHILDREN

A report by the Federal Health Office in Berlin, West Germany found that noise of low-flying military jets can lead to behavior problems in children and does not rule out long-term health problems from such noise. The report was done in Area 7, a low flying area around Hesselberg in Bavaria, West Germany.

One effect of military jet noise on children is damage to the immune system, which helps fight off illness and disease. Other health effects include loss of hearing, high blood pressure and behavioral disturbances. Girls and boys up to the age of four and girls in general are most likely to be affected, the report notes:

1.) Children in Area 7 were noise on military training routes are, on average, 6.6 times greater than model predictions." The GEIS continues to state, "Overall annoyance on military training routes averages 11.7 times greater than ROUTEMAP predictions." These findings must be calculated for the proposed activities in the northeast.

LASERS

The DEIS failed to describe the targeting and navigational operations that may involve laser enhanced weapons systems such as LANTIRN. The DEIS failed to describe the features and operating restrictions associated with the safe usage of such systems. The potential hazards of these systems have not been assessed.

Thermal burns to the retina are the greatest hazard to the eye with little recovery possible. Symptoms of corneal damage to the eye by an ultraviolet laser are red, watering eyes and acute pain. Since infrared and ultraviolet lasers cannot be seen by the naked eye, victims of corneal eye damage from lasers may not be aware of the contact with, and injury by, lasers for Ethene, Propane, 2-Methyl propane, n-Butane, 2-Methyl butene-2, Trans-2 butene, n-Pentane, Cyclohexane, Benzene, Toluene, Dodecane, Tetradecane, Hexadecane, Naphthalene, Anthracene, Chrysene, Benzo pyrene, Formaldehyde, Acetaldehyde, Acrolein, and Benzaldehyde. As the DEIS states, "In most instances, flights at these levels would be below the mixing height so these elevated pollutant emissions would be dispersed toward the ground," an assessment of these contaminants and their potential environmental impacts must be addressed.

What are health impacts to human and wildlife from aircraft pollutant emissions? Will a monitoring system be established for aircraft pollutant emissions? What are the emission factors for all military aircraft types which will be utilizing the proposed and current airspace?

EMR

The DEIS failed to provide an analysis of current and future exposures by humans and wildlife to all forms of electromagnetic radiation from all DOD sources.

Will there be additional training devices such as threat emitters, scoring systems for combat training, radar installations, and other devices installed for the proposed expansion? If so, how many devices will there be and where will they be placed? Will the devices be shielded and fenced off? Will radiation monitoring programs be established? Will potentially impacted residents be warned of potential health hazards? What measures will be taken to control radiation levels?

HERO

The impacts of high and low frequency non-ionizing radiation from training devices such as threat emitters, scoring systems for combat training, earth to satellite transmitters, electronic warfare systems and radar installations scattered across the Nation are posing a significant hazard to exposed civilian population and wildlife. The location of all such devices utilized for training activities and the associated airspace and bombing ranges was not supplied and mapped in order to adequately address potential impacts.

The DEIS fails to supply information on military aircraft on-board radar systems. These systems are known to cause radio, TV, and other electrical interference.

JUSTIFICATION

The need for such training is questionable, Eugene J. Carroll, Jr. Rear Admiral, USN (Ret.), Deputy Director for the Center for Defense Information, Oct. 31, 1991 wrote, "I hold that low level flight tactics are now obsolete and prohibitively costly. In the old days before the ballistic missile it was considered necessary to send unescorted aircraft into defended airspace at a very low level in hopes of escaping radar detection. This was the only feasible tactic for aircraft attempting deep penetration of defended territory because once detected they were almost certain to be shot down by surface to air missiles or fighter interceptors. Now nuclear bombers follow missiles and the air defense system will be severely degraded or destroyed before our aircraft enter enemy territory. In a non-nuclear war, low level attacks are equally hazardous because of improved radars, look-down-shoot down capable fighter inter-

From

Rep. Olympia Snowe I will fight low-level overflights

In the next couple of weeks the Air National Guard will hold public meetings in Presque Isle and Mexico to discuss its proposals on low level training flights in Aroostook County and western Maine. In both areas it proposes to fly over 1,000 flights every year at levels as low as 100 feet. Regarding this proposal I have said it before but it is worth repeating—I am unequivocally opposed to this and I intend to stop it.

This issue must be viewed in the context of what is important to the people of Maine, and what is important to the Air Force. Last year the people of Maine received an education about what factors were most essential to the Air Force. As everyone is aware, the Air Force targeted the low level flights proposal, the Air National Guard recently published an environmental impact statement. This analysis examined the issues of safety, pollution, and noise, and the impact that these flights would have on tourism, wildlife, and the quality of life of the people living in the affected areas. It was right to examine those areas; they are all matters of great concern. However, in the final analysis, the whole study amounted to nothing more than a bureaucratic make-work project designed to corroborate the Air Force's position.

For example, in addressing the quality of life issue, the statement reads: "This relatively remote region is valued for its solitude, and the visual impact of aircraft flying at low levels in this area when combined with the noise from the aircraft could adversely affect opportunities for solitude and primitive recreation."

Jets screaming at tree top level

"I am unequivocally opposed to this and I intend to stop it."

U.S. Rep. Olympia Snowe

Loring Air Force Base for closure. To support its decision the Air Force presented the Base Closing Commission with inaccurate and misleading information about Loring.

At the outset of the base closing process we were told repeatedly that the availability of unrestricted airspace was of prime importance, and that unquantifiable issues such as "quality of life" were not to be considered. Air Force Secretary Don Rice himself said that airspace was the single most important factor in deciding which bases would close and which would remain open.

However, as we all know, the Air Force heavily lobbied the Base Closing Commission to close Loring and to save Plattsburgh Air Force Base in upstate New York. Despite Plattsburgh's airspace restrictions, acknowledged by the Air Force's own data, the Air Force wanted to keep Plattsburgh open not for its strategic military value, but unbelievably, because of the multiple recreational facilities at Lake Placid and the close proximity of the base to Montreal. In doing so, the Air Force and the Commission turned the base closing process on its head, and the result was not only an insult to the people of Aroostook County, but a damaging blow to our national security as well.

Incredibly, one month after the Commission voted to close Loring, the Air Force came back to the people of Maine with this proposal to allow low level training flights in their backyards.

Now, as a result of the base closure decision, we all know that the Air Force really considers "quality of life" to be of prime importance. I say that jet planes screaming 100 feet above the ground will certainly harm the quality of life in Maine. I am anxiously waiting to hear the Air Force's rationale when holds its public meeting this month. Despite what the Air Force, General Duane Cassidy, and the members of the Base Closing Commission think, the quality of life in Maine is excellent, and I want to keep it that way.

As part of the process to evaluate will absolutely destroy the quality of the recreational and wilderness areas of the Allagash and in western Maine. The impact of these flights is clear; they would increase safety risks, increase air pollution and the release of hazardous materials, damage recreation and wilderness areas and the tourist industry, and yes, harm our quality of life.

However, the justification presented in this report for the need for the flights is a stunning admission by the Air National Guard just how critical unencumbered airspace continues to be for military preparedness. Clearly the Air Force chose to ignore this issue when they were considering the future of Loring Air Force Base. Yet it stated that this recent proposal is necessary to help alleviate the airspace pressures in upstate New York. If airspace in New York was such a major concern to the Air Force it could have closed Plattsburgh Air Force Base and kept Loring open. What the Air Force denied during the base closure process—that Plattsburgh has airspace problems—has now come back to haunt them.

The Air Force cannot have it both ways. Either quality of life is important, and if this is true then low level flights violate this criterion; or airspace is paramount, and if that's the case, then keep Loring open.

Over the course of the next few months the Air National Guard will revise its environmental impact statement and issue a final statement in June. In this preliminary study, there is a record of the number of people who attended the meetings held in Presque Isle and Farmington last July and who spoke in opposition to the proposal. I hope that everyone who shares my deep concern about this issue will once again attend and express their opposition at the meetings at the Northern Maine Technical College in Presque Isle on March 31, at 7:30 p.m., and at Mountain Valley Middle School in Mexico on April 2, at 7:30 p.m. That way there will be no mistaking the views of the people of Maine with respect to preserving their quality of life.

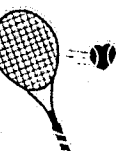

ceptors, and greatly improved low altitude defenses with automatic weapons and shoulder fired surface-to-air missiles. Even in Vietnam we had to abandon low level attacks because of unacceptable losses and now the situation is even worse. Witness Iraq where British Tornado aircraft used low level tactics against Iraqi airfields. Their losses were catastrophic. The training goes on because it justifies flight hours, training funds, and it is exciting fun for the flight crews."

The need for such low altitude training and the applications of such training in the war scenario must also be questioned.

CONCLUSION

We are extremely concerned that U.S. citizens living in sparsely populated areas are regarded as expendable by their own nation and by the very people entrusted to protect their lives and rights as citizens of our nation.

The date for parent teacher conferences has been changed and notices have been sent home. Conferences will be on Monday, April 13, from noon until 8 p.m. Conferences will be scheduled as usual to accommodate parents with more than one to attend.

There will be no school for children on that day. There will be a spring book fair the week before and on conference day. This book fair will not be a fundraiser, but to encourage summer reading it will be our buy one, get one free fair. Should be fun.

Another springtime activity, Kindergarten registration, is almost upon us. Any child born on or before Oct. 15, 1987, needs to be registered for next fall's kindergarten. Please call 674-2332, our office, for an appointment. Please call as soon as you can to help us start planning on next year's enrollment.

The second annual double elimination basketball tournament is in full swing at this writing. Teams from West Paris, Woodstock, Turner, Buckfield, Harrison/Waterford, Mechanic Falls, Norway/Paris, and Gorham, N.H. are participating. The first two games found Gorham, N.H. finishing two points ahead of Woodstock in a very exciting game, and Norway/Paris soundly defeating West Paris. However all teams compete until they have lost two games, so we are still cheering on our local teams. Check in next week for final results.

In the classrooms this week we find the kindergartners enjoying sharing time and playing the I Am Thinking game emphasizing the sounds of s, t, and r. In math they have been making graphs of the different colors of their classmates hair. They are also making designs and pictures with their pattern blocks. They are studying the letter U and are making the upper and lower case U out of yarn. Parent volunteer, Mrs. Makley, is helping the children make kazoo's. Sounds like fun and noise.

The first-graders are reading and learning about fables. Fables for this past week were The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg and The Crow and the Pitcher. In their reading books they are finding out about spring with Bobby Bear and Maple Sugar, Bobby Bear in the Spring and Little Pussy Willow. In writing they are publishing books that have four parts through their very own Bear Paw Publishing Company. In math the children are working with geoboards, copying patterns in pairs with the elastics on the geoboards. They are also copying patterns on paper and in their math workbooks. They are experimenting with balance in weights and measures, and are learning the value of coins. They can buy stickers by answering money questions.

The second-graders are welcoming student teacher, Mrs. Koskela, to their room for the next eight weeks. One of their first projects together is to make, and stuff with newspaper, their very own dinosaur.

In math they are going out-of-doors to measure the heights of dinosaurs. They will then compare the results and see how big their dinosaur was in relation to the dinosaurs of their classmates.

Every student in the second grade has had a chance to be Mrs. Perham's special helper of the week. There is not enough time to go through the class again by weeks, so now we have a student of the day.

The special helpers this past week were Steven Bennett, Ben Blake, Devin Coffin, Jessica Duplisea, and Jason Emery. Students of the day, as well as everyone else is looking forward to next week's Dinosaur Parade. Costumes are being made at home and the entire school will get a chance to see all the dinosaurs.

Mr. Burke's third-graders are working hard. In writing they are generating ideas with a pre-writing technique of questioning. Strips of paper are assigned three categories, characters (who), places (where), and why (because). All the children fill out as many strips as possible and the ideas are then shared to help spur on the writing process. In math they are working on rounding, estimating and the addition algorithm. In science they are working with levers and wedges.

Mr. Litchfield's fourth-graders are showing their appreciation for their concert at Mr. Richard Perham's and have written him thank you notes. Music from the organ ranged from the "Phantom of the Opera" to the Muppet Song. In social studies the class is continuing the study of the North Central Region and are learning the meaning of belt: corn belt, wheat belt, dairy belt. In math they are continuing to work with division and the distributive property. They are taking division facts and breaking them down into simpler known division facts and putting them together.

My fifth-graders are finishing up their units in the reading program we are piloting. This week's activities included listening to one of our stories on tape. This really made the story come alive. We are continuing with fractions in math. We do workbook pages, use pattern blocks, make up our own fraction patterns and sentences, and play fraction games. We are finishing up our study of the body systems in health/science in preparation for our unit on puberty, which will be presented by the school nurse. We are continuing with our study of the Civil Wars. Each student has made a time line of historical events with emphasis on the wars fought by this country. This week's poem is The Rainbow by William Wordsworth.

Mr. Koch was absent from his sixth grade for two days this week. He was attending a workshop as part of a committee studying Effective Schools, Perspective for Tomorrow. We have to deal with our day to day routine, but we also have to aim and plan for the future. His class has started a whole group science fiction novel, "The White Mountains" by J. Christopher. A variety of projects will be produced from this book. In math they have started studying area and perimeter. They are drawing to scale using color files and other manipulatives. Of course the old fashioned graph paper is still appropriate also. In social studies they are studying the causes and effects of World War I. In writing they are writing, illustrating and publishing books to be shared with the first-graders.

Local Girl Scouts receiving awards for selling cookies were fifth-grader Jessica Beane and Theresa Rainey. Jessica was the overall top salesperson with 244 boxes sold. Theresa sold over 100 boxes as did fourth-graders Charly Weiss and Lindsay Newell. Congratulations to all.

Middle schooler knows his world

At Saturday's semi-final state Geography Bee, Telstar Middle School's Amos Hausman-Rogers barely missed advancing to the state finals.

Amos won Telstar's recent geography bee. He then took a written exam, placed in the top 100 entries from across the state and qualified for the semi-final competition.

On Saturday, the 100 students competing in the semi-finals in Bangor were divided up into five groups of 20. The top two participants from each group advanced to the state finals. Amos placed third in his group.

Ben Michaud takes national medal in

Ben Michaud of Bethel took his first National Championships medal with a second place finish behind Olympic team member Josh Thompson in the 20 kilometer event in Anchorage, Alaska Thursday.

The Gould Academy graduate edged out Olympic team member Erich Wilbrecht by eight seconds. With four misses out of 20 shots, only Thompson shot better than Michaud, who missed five. A one minute penalty is added to the skiers time in the 20k event.

Ben Michaud takes first national medal in biathlon

Ben Michaud of Bethel took his first National Championships medal with a second place finish behind Olympic team member Josh Thompson in the 20 kilometer event in Anchorage, Alaska Thursday.

The Gould Academy graduate edged out Olympic team member Erich Wilbrecht by eight seconds. With four misses out of 20 shots, only Thompson shot better than Michaud, who missed five. A one minute penalty is added to the skiers time in the 20k event.

Michaud's teammate James

Upham of Farmington won the junior 10 kilometer event, and posted a time that would have placed him in the top ten in the senior race. Upham, as well as his sister and Mt. Blue High School ski team member Hannah, competed for the U.S. at the Junior World Championships in Canmore, Alberta, earlier this month.

Michaud and Upham are students at Northern Michigan University in Marquette, Michigan and members of the U.S. Olympic Committee's biathlon training center there.

Middle school OMers take third at states

Two Telstar Middle School Odyssey of the Mind teams took third place finishes in the state OM finals held Saturday in Bangor.

The Alice in Omerland and OMument teams placed first in regional competition held at Telstar High School earlier this month to advance to the state finals.

Telstar's OMument team was the only team at the state finals to receive an Outstanding Omer Award. The award is sometimes given to teams which the judges consider to have an overall superior presentation.

OMument team members include: Anneliese Bass, Caitlin Bass, Katie Chapman, Bonnie Crocker, Ben Fogg, Marcy LaVallee and M.J. Learned.

Alice in Omerland team members are: Teri Chadbourne, Becky Chandler, Jarrod Crockett, Andy Dennis, Lydia Grover and Martha Grover.

Chapter I Family Night will offer bookswap

By NATALIE TIMBERLAKE

Book Swap will be one of the new features for the Annual Chapter I Family Festival Night this year. Students will be bringing home information on how they will exchange "oldies but goodies" from their home reading for newer or different ones. This innovation replaces a sale of new books held in previous years.

Family Night will be held this year on Tuesday, April 7, at Telstar Middle/High School cafeteria from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

This night of fun as well as business is this district's time for complying with Federal and State Chapter I regulations which require a general gathering of parents of Chapter I students to review the purposes and guidelines for operating the Chapter I program locally.

The cafeteria becomes a midway for several challenging and enjoyable activities featuring letter print and math. Another new attraction this year will be a face painting station planned and manned by Chapter I Parent Advisory members.

The climax of the evening is the entertainment by local performers, followed by refreshments of ice cream sundaes served by the local Chapter I staff.

Chapter I staff members are: Mary Richardson, Andover; Jean McGuire, Woodstock; Kathleen McCluskey, Eva Bowers, Phyllis Buchanan, Joanne Riley, Rhonda Buker, Crescent Park; and district coordinator, Natalie Timberlake.

Pharmacy & Your Health

David Preble, Preb's Pharmacy
Many Americans Not Properly Vaccinated

According to the National Council on Patient Information and Education, many Americans are not protected against certain bacterial or viral infections because they have not received appropriate vaccinations. The Council reports that only 70 to 80 percent of preschool children have received all scheduled immunizations. Several thousand adults die each year from complications of influenza, a condition that can be prevented with proper immunization. The problem may occur from an inadequate understanding of the need for vaccinations by parents and other adults, or the failure of health care providers to ask family members about vaccinations.

According to a recent issue of Postgraduate Medicine, since 1983 the number of cases of measles has increased dramatically. The American Academy of Pediatrics is now recommending that children aged 11 to 12 receive another dose of measles vaccine (the first dose is given to infants at 15 months). The Academy further recommends that college students receive the second dose if they received only one dose. Vaccines for H influenza type b can be given to infants as young as two months to prevent bacterial meningitis. High-risk persons such as health workers and IV drug users can prevent hepatitis B if they are vaccinated with the hepatitis B vaccine series.

By CONSTANCE BROADBENT

Dear Tom and Robin,
What fun it was to meet you and to get to know you! And how unusual for us to meet on the snowy turf of Southern Connecticut after heading north and south respectively into the remains of winter. But the cause was just...to christen dear little Margaret Caroline, our third "grandchild" and Tom's godchild. It's really "grand" of the O'Donnells to share their children's children with us this way.

Those children serve as a happy reminder to us all that the joy is there for the taking. They live in the present; they believe in goodness; they are blind to hate. They stand as models of unconditional love and we stand to benefit by watching them and seeking to be like them.

While we were in the chilly south of New England, enjoying the Bozutos and the O'Donnells, playing with the children and being renewed, the folk of this village sought their own joy. Martha and Lydia Grover bask with Marcy LaVallee in the number-one-ness of their Odyssey-of-the-Mind teams; Maynard Morgan enjoys binocular vision with restored and most necessary intra-ocular pressure. Rupert Grover and the G-Mens friends of the end-of-season-ice-fish tell the trout tail of the recent romp.

With the christening behind us, and Peter Rabbit and family stored on the shelf with the other sitters, we wheeled north as you flew back to Tampa. We took our sweet time rolling along over hill and dale, ogling the architecture and the arboreta. The ride took us through the farmland of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, and back into our beloved Maine just after dark. It was a delightful daily.

And now it's hopscotching the events once more. We got back just in time for choir practice...the songs sound better and better as our confidence and voices join forces. Next it was time for the Bethel Health Center's annual meeting cum dinner. We sat with Ruth and Arthur Gilbert to witness the presentation of the Jan Stowell Volunteer bowl of thanks to our friend and neighbor Richard Hosterman. Dick was honored for his "foot-stomping" leadership on behalf of the neonatal recycling program. We also applauded as Jane Hosterman handed over her invisible gavel to the incoming president of the organization, Lorrie Hoeh.

Tonight we "do grange." That's a fun filled pot-luck supper followed by an attempt at straight faces as we conduct a monthly meeting that is at once serious in its intent, always educational to some degree, and ever a forum for fraternity.

That fellowship follows us from event to event, from house to house as we live out our weeks in the west of Maine. We hope that some day soon you two will be able to fly away to these mountains to sample the syrup...the buckets are on the maples, the fires are ready as we speak...

Meanwhile, in the wake of a wonderful week, and prompted by our connectedness through Amy, George, and Margaret, the beautiful girl-child, I'd like to repeat a thought which I first uttered at Christmastime...the truth of which I saw reflected in each of you...

If, like the children, we accept new people and new experience

YEARNING FOR THE REAL MUD SEASON—Greenwood Road Commissioner Alan Seames works to clear the intake of a frozen culvert, as the runoff from recent rains happily makes its own way across the road. With the ground, and many ditches and culverts, still frozen solid, the recent rains have played havoc with local roads, and kept road crews busy attempting to prevent or repair the worst of the damage.

with open minds, if we approach each encounter with enthusiasm rather than expectations, if we promise ourselves that we will not prejudice a situation, we would discover the truth that the children instinctively know...that people are good and life is worthwhile.

Cherish your lives as you nurture your love. Keep in touch...and Tom, keep this thought to sustain you...there are plenty of Peace Pops in Bethel.

Love, C.B.

Each spring when I watch the renewal of life after the time of winter I realize that the basic facts of the season are few and simple. Spring comes when there is a rise in degrees in temperature from one week to the next and there are a few more minutes of daylight than darkness. These have governed life before the time of man. The best that man can do is chart spring astronomically then cooperate with it when it comes.

Trees are slowly and persistently working toward leaf and blossom. Soon I can stand on a hillside in April and feel spring coming. I will feel it in the breeze from the southland and in the mellow warmth of the sun's rays. I'll hear it in the heart-lifting carols of the birds.

When April arrives, we know that the stirring miracle of life's resurrection is on its way. Earth has taken its rest through the cold months. Now the new season comes. Each day the sun takes a higher road across the heavens. An inverted blue meadow is over the land below. Cumulus clouds graze peacefully along the sky.

All over the countryside there's a spirit of April, a month of magic. So lovely is April with her goss-samer wings./ As with wild abandon she dances in spring./ Shy little flowers peep from her eyes./ And the south wind breathes with ecstatic sighs. (Stellar Mann)

Everyone is talking about the snow and saying, "I'm glad we didn't get the 11 inches they received along the Coast."

The selectmen are preparing for their annual property assessments for April 1. There are two buildings in town that are in violation of health codes and something will have to be done on this. Building permits of the past year were reviewed.

Church services will be held in the Stoneham Church for the month of April. This begins at 10 a.m. The Early Morning Walks from the parsonage continues beginning at 7 a.m. on Wednesdays.

This will be a short news item as I was gone over the weekend to our camp at Wilsons Mills with son, Albert Nelson, Jr. and Troy Nelson and several other couples from town for a weekend of snowmobiling. There's still a lot of snow there and we had an enjoyable time. We rode 120 miles one day and needless to say, everyone retired early that evening.

Betty Morrison has gone back to work at the Norway Footwear Co. I have gone back to work full time for now so don't have much news.

The Daughters of Veterans meeting scheduled for Wednesday, March 25 was canceled due to illness of members and has been rescheduled for April 15 to be held at the home of Joyce Gouin in Norway.

The community was saddened this week by two deaths, Fannie Baker and Marion Swan. Fannie's, while not unexpected, was nevertheless unhappy news for her family and friends, and Marion's, being unexpected, was both a shock and a sad occasion. The town offers its sincerest sympathy to the families on the loss of their loved ones.

Spring seems not only to have sprung but sprung a leak as well, as the rains came down Friday morning causing washouts, mini-cascades, and private ponds on usually grassy lawns. On Thursday forecasters had been predicting three or four days of rain but it had pretty well slowed to a drizzle and fog by midday, causing most people to give a sigh of relief. I'm sure if sump pumps could, they would echo that sigh as they certainly have been working overtime to keep cellars as dry as possible.

Ralph Mills celebrated his 36th birthday Friday, March 27 at his home in Colchester, Vermont. It is one thing to think of oneself at 36 and another to realize your child is 36. Somehow children seem to remain children in parent's eyes no matter how old they, or we, get. The trick is not to treat them as such!

The Ladies Circle met Wednesday, March 18 at the Sunday School room with 11 members present. This was the first meeting after the winter recess and much business was discussed, followed by a silent auction. Refreshments were served including a birthday cake for Gladys Jordan made by Charlotte Cole. After singing Happy Birthday to Gladys, Margie Swan and Mary Stone joined Charlotte in singing some of her favorite hymns. The members are very sad at the loss of their devoted member and Circle secretary, Marion Swan. They all knew her to be a very special lady.

The Oxford County Council met with the Jackson-Silver Post and Unit for the March meeting on Tuesday evening March 17, with a good attendance. Refreshments of finger rolls, chips, bars and coffee were served by the Auxiliary after the meetings.

Sandy Nash of Dixfield visited Lorraine Mills at her home on Wednesday and then they went to visit Thelma Merrill at Ledgeview Memorial Home in West Paris.

Gladys Jordan celebrated her 87th birthday Saturday, March 21 with visits from her family on Friday evening and Saturday. She received three lovely bouquets of flowers and two birthday cakes, besides money, cards, and gifts. She enjoyed dinner at the Country Way on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jordan and Mildred Swett where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Jordan and Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Brown, Jr. Her other callers were Arnold Jordan, Beatrice and Raymond Buck, Berna Flanders, Vera Cross, Vance Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Troy Jordan and girls, Georgia and Mansfield Packard, and Bessie House. Quite a celebration for this young lady of 87 years.

John and Lorraine Mills were in Norway Thursday afternoon where they visited patients at Stephens Memorial Hospital. Lorraine visited Carolyn Merrill on the surgical ward while John visited his cousin, Ernest Mundt who is ill with pneumonia. Lorraine also visited Ernest for a few minutes after her visit with Carolyn. Both seem to be doing well and anxious to get home. As the saying goes they may be nice places to visit but no one wants to live there.

Another lovely Monday morning for all to enjoy around here. Had a little snow in the night but not much. Guess we are very lucky the way it has been supposed to be. We are all looking toward Spring. I am sure and hopeful it will get here pronto.

Have heard some say that they have seen robins already but seems as though they must be having a hard time to get enough to eat but that is the way it turns out most every week. I often think of the birds and what they have out there to get to feed on. Doesn't look that good to me when they love the bugs so well. I'm sure it would be interesting to see just what goes on in their minds.

I was at the physical therapist and then to the doctor on Wednesday. Russell, Peggy and I went to Franklin Grange for one of our usual meetings. Turned out much better than I had thought it might so guess the good Lord had his hand in the get up of it all.

Laura Hutchins was here for a little on Monday evening before we headed for Grange. We had been there on Sunday and I had forgotten that I had left my rubbers when we got ready to leave for home.

Was at the doctors again on Wednesday. It is near hopeless to get anyone to help you now and we sure need help lots of times. Also went to see a nerve doctor on Wednesday so it was quite a day for me. This new doctor won't help as fast as some but if he can help me that is the best part.

Friday Russell and I went to town to get groceries.

Brother Tom stopped in one day last week for a visit while I was gone. Had too many enjoyments to not have a good time.

Saturday evening, Peggy went to the dance as usual and had a good time. She said many were asking how Russell was doing and we couldn't tell a lie so they know he is doing better than a lot of folks his age could of done under the same circumstance. He exercised the places a lot and they are getting better.

Sunday, callers at Lawrence Yates home for awhile trying to help out. They have such a nice large family it must be nice to know someone will come if needed.

Talked with Mary Lovejoy for a little and she couldn't go to see the doctor today as her little girl is sick and needs to stay home to get better. Her usual visitors who usually come were there to visit. David and Harrison Small were there to visit and make things better just by calling.

Don't forget that West Paris Grange has another dance on Saturday, April 4. So come prepared for a good time for all.

Hope you all keep healthy and have a good week ahead.

separation of the Sunday River side of Newry from whatever the other side is called.

Residents of Riley have long felt they have much in common with people in the Sunday River valley, especially, disgruntlement with the local school system.

"The district thinks because we're up here on the end of Monkey Brook Road we're all a bunch of knuckle dragging simians or extreme skiers," Bingo Green said. "But I've got photographs to prove that my forerunners weren't furbearers, and they have been walking upright for at least three generations. And no one in my family ever had to use moussie to get his hair up!"

Like Newry, Riley has repeatedly locked horns with SAD #44 regarding their share of the school tax bill.

Riley pays 10 percent of the district's budget to educate only one student—a 24-year-old sixth-grader taking advance placement self-esteem courses.

"Paying 10 percent of the school tax bill is just unfair," said Schuesse, who also serves as town assessor. "When the condos come, we'll get a free ride like those folks in Newry, but right now my tax base is mainly chipmunks and tree growth reimbursements. And I forgot to file for the tree growth."

"And it's not fair," Green said, "that my boy Herman has to ride all the way out to that middle school in Bethel with them younger kids. I say the district should send a teacher and administrator out here and build us a school."

Residents eventually decided to set up committees to study withdrawal from both SAD #44 and from the State of Maine.

They agreed, however, not to take any further action until they learn the fate of Gov. McKernan's proposal to sell off chunks of territory to help balance the state budget.

Booths blasted

Despite the renewed civic interest demonstrated by Town Meeting turnout, voters overwhelmingly defeated an article calling for the town to build voting booths (estimated cost $100) and set up its own polling place.

"It's just unAmerican," said Ma Joad, proprietress of Pa's Wine and Bait Shoppe. Pointing out that only one local voter in five usually turns out to cast their ballot, she said: "I'm highly offended that this small minority of self-appointed activists think they can get together every two years in November and tell the government of the United States what to do. The township shouldn't do anything to encourage them."

Voters also defeated a proposal to pave five miles roads connecting Twin Bridges with the outside world.

Supporters argued that the roadwork would be paid for entirely by the federal government, would spur economic development and the creation of badly needed jobs.

But opponents countered: "The town doesn't belong in the transportation business."

"The next thing you know they'll be wanting us to run light poles up here," Green said. "Then some fool will want a streetlight in front of his A-frame, or more amps for his Gro-lights. Where's the town going to get the money for that? I'm not paying higher taxes and sacrificing the long-term capital investment program for my still... that is, my pharmaceutical equipment, just so the people I sell Grandma's medicine to can see to stumble home."

Following lunch, catered by Green, the town's unemployment rate jumped to 100 percent, when voters decided the township could longer afford to plow private driveways.

The decision put the only town employee, and gainfully employed resident, out of work. "The road commissioner's just going to have to disconnect the plow from his Pinto and hang up his earmuffs," Green said.

Over easy

Despite the large turn-out and heated debate, the meeting moved along briskly—except for continual interruptions by a representative of the local weekly media, pestering voters with probing questions like: "Wad he say?" "How do you spell her name?" "What's a tree growth?" Is that like, like a pine cone?" "Does anybody have extra batteries? My Game Boy won't beep."

But a suave stringer for a large metropolitan daily asked no questions and left before lunch. "My paper pays by the yard," he gloated, "and there's a ten percent bonus if I file before noon."

The final bit of business for the day was carried unanimously by the three voters who stuck the meeting out to the bitter end—it was agreed that by law the Riley Township annual Town Meeting would always be held on April 1.

LURC hearing

River is seeking to rezone, according to skiway spokesman Skip King. King said the initial phases of the expansion would be serviced from the skiway's current base facilities in Newry. Base facilities in the rezoned area would only be constructed if and when the expansion reaches that far into Riley, King said.

Skiway officials have been reluctant to commit to a timetable for their expansion plans, but LURC's approval for the first phase calls for work to start within three years and to be completed within five years.

In a narrative accompanying the rezoning application, Sunday River projects a 8 to 10 percent yearly growth in skier days over the next five years, and targets the mid-week, destination market for much of that growth.

"The multi-day midweek vacation skier is key to the long term stability of the resort," the narrative contends, and to attract such skiers the resort must expand its terrain: "Skiers, who are increasingly selective with their destination choices, tend to equate size with the quality of the vacation. A broader selection of terrain choices ensures that they will not become bored with the resort's terrain. For almost all of its history, Sunday River has been perceived by discriminating skiers as being a fine place for a one-or-two day visit, but too small to provide the challenge and variety needed for a multi-day ski experience. The expansion to date of trails and lifts has allayed some of that perception, yet the resort is still not recognized as a true destination by many skiers who tend to visit western ski areas or areas in Vermont. By expanding, the resort will cross a threshold and become firmly established as capable of providing all the challenge and variety vacationers seek."

The narrative goes on to describe the topography of the Riley terrain is ideal for this market: "The mountain range provides ideal exposure for ski trails and excellent pitches for ski terrain. Sunday River's studies of the area of proposed expansion show that it receives more natural snowfall and holds snow longer than the terrain of the existing resort. This will assist in lengthening the ski season. These attributes of topography and climate suggest the area will be very attractive to skiers."

Sunday River also argues that the expansion will mean more local jobs. The skiway currently employs 200 full-time, year-round employees, but employment swells to nearly 1,000 during busy winter weekends. The rezoning application projects 1996 employment at 1200.

soldier, who was very popular with the young people of Margaret's day. He was invited to all their parties and they confided in him. Many years later I saw Margaret in the same role with lots of young friends who were drawn by her incredible curiosity about everything as well as her broad smile and warm personality.

Although educated at Gould Academy (Class of 1914), Mount Holyoke and Harvard, she continued to read widely until her eyesight failed. Every conversation with her was wide-ranging and challenging. She always wanted to know the current state of things, whether it be events in Bethel or politics.

I hope this letter provides some idea of what I feel has been lost, but also what knowing her has meant to me and countless others—a life dedicated to learning and good humor, to maintaining courage despite great adversity, to living intensely and usefully.

Stan Howe
Bethel Historical Society

To the Editor:

With the passing of Margaret Herick Oakes at Augusta, March 23, Bethel lost a remarkable dynamic lady born here 95 years ago. Petite and vibrant she had a capacity for real friendship. I was blessed to long enjoy her gift of that.

Despite worsening physical handicaps: loss of hearing, sight, and mobility, she still wanted to communicate and know what her friends were doing as well as about her beloved Bethel, and this rapidly changing world.

Always observing, and witty, her active brain still kept her outgoing even as her days became more painful.

I was with her when she bravely supervised the packing of her possessions prior to leaving her loved Augusta home, and she frequently paused to share the history of an antique piece or a picture. Offhandedly she pointed to a small framed picture of herself and arranged with one of her husbands when they were each about six or seven years old. She said, "If you would like it please do take it home." When I said I would cherish it, she smiled happily. It gives me daily fine memories of my visits with her. I can picture her wandering the streets of Bethel appearing "an inquisitive child," she said, "in every Bethel kitchen to discover how others lived."

In my memories is that of Peter, a beautiful yellow tiger cat who I would find close to her on my visits for over 20 years: he grew deaf and blind, but sensitive to his mistress's every move until the sad day he was taken to be put to sleep. Friends over the years she spent in nursing home brought her a variety of stuffed cat toys she appreciated, but they were not Peter. She had taken keen interest in supporting Humane Society activities.

Recent years, unable to visit Bethel, she could retain her view of it as the lovely town of her happy childhood. She took a great interest in the Historical Society located on the street where still stands her home and she wondered at the changes read to her from The Citizen.

She had spoken to me about "looking forward" to her final resting place at Riverside near husband and parents, and many old friends. Until that time came she courageously passed her days.

Late Adult Ed listings

Adult Children of Melancholics. A newly formed Adult Children of Melancholics group has begun meeting at 3 p.m. weekdays. Facilitator Dolores Haze said: "As our nation shifts from a production-based to a grievance-based economy, it's essential that ACMEs organize to demand their fair share of the victimization dollar."

Parallel Parking. Susan Clement Farrar, director of the Children's Dance Studio of Bethel, will teach a three session workshop on parallel parking. "As with any form of movement art," Miss Sue said, "it's essential that the student thoroughly master the fundamentals before attempting to move on to more creative forms of self expression." The third and final session of the workshop will focus on the instructor's own off-commented-upon technique—the classic and ever-stylish pliè park.

It's Bust 'N Burn time

The Third Annual Bust and Burn and Budweiser's Legends of Freestyle competitions will rattle down the precipitous moguls of Sunday River's White Heat trail April 4 and 5. The event features 16 originators of freestyle skiing including Wayne Wong, Scott Brooksbank, "Airborne" Eddie Ferguson and 200 top amateur competitors. A variety of additional activities are planned.

The 800 foot-long Legends mogul course is set on one of the steepest pitches of Sunday River's White Heat ski trail. Competitors are judged on quantity and quality of turns, speed, route through the heavily moguled course and the performance of at least two aerial maneuvers during the run. Qualifying runs for Bust and Burn competitors will take place Saturday, with head-to-head elimination heats for Bust and Burn competitors and the Legends competition on Sunday. Sunday will also feature a special snowboard challenge event and a special mountain bike competition in which bikers will attempt to negotiate the course on two wheels.

The Legends weekend will offer a variety of activities. Non-skiers may watch the competitions, accessing them by means of the White Cap Quad chairlift. Alcoholic beverages will not be permitted on the mountain. The weekend will also feature parties, live entertainment, and bungee jumping from a 150 foot crane. In addition, the resort expects to offer skiing on at least 60 trails, served by all 11 of its chairlifts.

Voters also decided to purchase equipment for the highway department.

The purchase of a new steam cleaner and high pressure washer was passed with no discussion. Selectman and road commissioner Percy Monk, however, was asked to explain why the department wanted a new truck.

Monk said the selectmen wanted to sell the town's 4-wheel-drive truck and replace it with a 10-wheel truck.

"The truck we have now was made for a double-wing V-plow to plow snow drifts," Monk said. "It's not a universal truck to be used everyday. That truck sits all summer long because it can't be used."

Monk said he was hoping to get $35,000 for the truck and its plowing equipment. That money would be combined with $8,000 to purchase another truck which could be used year-round. After the explanation, voters approved the move with little opposition.

Without discussion, townspeople also approved creating a committee to formulate a noise ordinance. The proposed ordinance would be voted on at next year's Town Meeting.

After some discussion on the merits of razing or repairing the town's baseball grandstand, voters approved $7,500 for its repair.

Monk estimated that about 80 percent of the structure was salvageable. He said the roof, underpinnings and some planking needed repair. Several voters suggested that the town put most of the funds into supplies and ask for volunteer labor to complete the work.

Voters turned down a proposal to raise $1,304 for membership in the Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments. Selectmen Elton Cole and Pam House recommended against AVCOG membership.

"Depending upon who you talk to down there," Cole said, "you're bound to get differing opinions."

In town elections, Leon Poland Jr. was chosen to replace retiring selectman Pam House.

Poland defeated Jean Blanchard for the seat by a vote of 48 to 38.

No nominations were made for an opening on the SAD #44 school board. Debra Poland gave up her directors seat after six years on the board.

Voters gave selectmen the authority to appoint a director. Town Manager Maxfield said after the meeting that anyone interested in the position should call the town office.

HEALTH CENTER AWARDS

The Bethel Area Health Center presented three community awards at its annual dinner and membership meeting last week.

David Preble of Preb's Pharmacy received the Medical Director's Award.

The President's Award went to Sam Timberlake of Bethel.

Dick Hosterman of Bethel was named Volunteer of the Year.

Bethel budgeteers OK selectmen's tax goal

The Bethel Budget Committee began its review of the selectmen's FY '93 budget draft Monday by agreeing--unanimously--with the selectmen's position that the goal of this year's town budget should be to hold the local tax bill steady.

The selectmen presented the budgeteers with a draft budget calling for a 2 percent decrease in town expenses, --despite increases in solid waste costs and debt service and a decrease in expected state revenue sharing income.

To get to the 2 percent decrease, the selectmen had pared away at the police officer reserve account (down $10,000), a position in the public works department, social services and building maintenance (both down 10 percent across the board), and made a number of other cuts, such as in the accounts paying for the town planning assistant.

In their own initial run-through Monday, the budget committee raised no major objections to any of the selectmen's proposals, although Jane Hosterman questioned the wisdom of continuing to put off necessary maintenance.

"I don't want to see us dig a hole for ourselves three or four years down the road," Hosterman said.

"We're already in that pit in some areas," responded Arlan Jodrey, chairman of the board of selectmen.

The budgeteers were scheduled to meet again Tuesday evening. Among the options on the table Tuesday were to be the purchase of a second police cruiser, a back hoe for the public works department and a $1,500 request from Town Clerk Merton Brown to be put toward the restoration of old town records.

The selectmen are scheduled to review the budget committee's recommendations at their own meeting Monday.

State traffic accidents decline

Maine State Police say overall traffic accidents in the state have dropped for the second consecutive year and attribute the mild winter weather as one of the reasons. Colonel Andrew E. Demers, chief of the State Police said there were 35,046 motor vehicle accidents during 1991, down from 37,468 in 1990 and 43,498 in 1989.

Demers said, "Overall traffic accidents are down 19 percent during the past two years and the lack of snow is a principal reason. Every time the snow flies, our phones start ringing with accident reports."

Demers said driver inattention was the most often cited cause for accidents during 1991, followed by failing to yield and unsafe speed.

The State Police Department is the to "buy back" the elementary music program.

The board agreed that the funds could be used to buy back the elementary teacher and supplies for the program. It was also agreed the three schools could spend any leftover money on artists in residence.

The directors also proposed cutting $54,500 from a special education contingency fund.

The district had budgeted $109,000 in case a special-needs student has to be placed outside of the district. Currently there are no students in SAD #44 requiring out-of-district placement.

"I think it's worth going out on a limb and saying, let's do it for this year," Bethel director Merton Brown said. "We spent the money in the account last year in December, so we're existing in the same situation right now."

Because of cut-backs in state aid checks in FY '92, in December district administration used $50,000 set aside in the out-of-district placement account to help balance the FY '92 budget.

The directors also tentatively eliminated a copy center position, at a savings of $7,439. In addition, they proposed reducing field trip and sports transportation expenses by $7,000.

Craig said the move would probably affect the Andover Elementary School the most, because it would limit the school's in-district field trips.

Bethel director Cheryl Eliot said she felt the move was a fair trade off with Andover for keeping its sixth-graders.

The proposed cuts add up to $126,210, which leaves the proposed FY '93 budget at $99,935 over last year's budget.

If the board follows their past budget cutting practices, the directors will continue to trim the budget until a majority agree on an amount to pass on to the taxpayers.

The next budget workshop is scheduled for Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Telstar Library.

Woodstock, Newry hit hardest

By WENDY HANSOM

Even if SAD #44 budgeters succeed in holding the line at last year's overall school budget level at approximately $5.9 million, (which looks unlikely at this point) increased expenses out of the district's control--such as electricity, insurance and contracted pay hikes--would raise the assessment to member towns by $84,372.

Last year, Andover, Bethel, Newry, Greenwood and Woodstock contributed $3,122,247 to the SAD #44 budget.

For comparison purposes, if the board were to hold the total budget at $5.9 million the impact on the various towns would be as follows.

Newry and Woodstock would pay most of the increase, due to increased state real-estate valuation in the two towns.

Newry's state valuation increased by 14.29 percent last year. The town will now pay over one quarter of the district's assessment.

The town's school tax assessment would increase from $758,706 to $822,818 a 8.45 increase.

Woodstock's state evaluation rose by 12.32 percent. Assuming the SAD #44 budget stays at last year's level, the town would pay 3.76 percent more this year. Last year's assessment was $389,969; this year's would be $415,578.

Greenwood's assessment would increase from $448,355 to $453,095, or 1.06 percent.

And because of the relative shifts in valuations, Bethel's and Andover's assessments would go down.

Bethel paid $1,100,904 in FY '92 and would be asked to pay $1,097,946 in FY '93, or .27 percent less.

Andover was assessed $424,313 last year. If the district budget holds steady, the town would pay $417,181 this year, or 1.68 percent less.

The school board appears likely to opt for the budget increase in order to avoid some cutbacks in staff and programs. If it does, town assessment figures will go up accordingly.

ed expansion show that it gives more natural snowfall and less snow longer than the terrain of existing resort. This will assist in gathering the ski season. These attributes of topography and climate suggest the area will be very attractive to skiers."

Sunday River also argues that the expansion will mean more local jobs. The skiway currently employs full-time, year-round employees, but employment swells to nearly 1,000 during busy winter weekends. The rezoning application projects 1996 employment at 1200.

This virtuoso ensemble will play an extraordinary range of music, from Bach to current popular songs. The quintet instruments are flute, clarinet, oboe, bassoon, and French horn.

Top 40 at Bingham Hall

Maine's popular a capella singers, "Top Forty," join Maine Humorist, Henry Bascomb, for an evening of music and humor in "A Spring Thaw" on Saturday, April 4 at 7:30 p.m. in Bingham Hall at Gould Academy in Bethel.

Top Forty singers Rick Rau, Eileen Colyne, Judy Andrucki, and Paul Macri discovered their common interest in fifties and sixties do-wop and early rock while singing with the Andros-coggin Chorus. In 1989 the group began performing publicly, and since then they have entertained at a variety of special performances around the state, including Bates College, Saturday Night on Islesboro, and the Sawyer Foundation. Most recently they "brought down the house" as part of the Maine Music Society's presentation Andros-coggin Chorus in a Jerome Kern Retrospective.

Top Forty's program in Bethel will include all time favorites: I Wonder Why, Chapel of Love, Little Darling, Just One Look, Why Do Fools Fall In Love, and You've Lost That Loving Feeling.

With Maine native Chitanya York joining the show as Henry Bascomb, there is sure to be laughter mixed with special memories of days gone.

York and Top Forty are contributing their talents in "A Spring Thaw" benefit concert in order to support the Maine Conservation School's fundraising efforts and help the Mahosuc Arts Council continue to bring programs in the Arts and Humanities to the schools and communities in the Bethel area of western Maine.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at Preb's in Bethel or by calling Mahosuc Arts Council office at 824-3575. Advance ticket prices are $5 for adults and $3 for students and seniors. Prices for tickets purchased at the door the evening of the performance are $6 for adults and $4 for students and seniors.

Jackson-Silver Auxiliary

The celebration of the American Legion's 73rd birthday, the honoring of Fannie Cummings, and a Czechoslovakian meal at the Jackson-Silver Post home in Locke Mills on Thursday, March 19 marked the culmination of months of planning and preparation by the Auxiliary.

It was 73 years ago this week that veterans of World War I gathered and formed The American Legion for the purpose of aiding their ill and injured comrades and assisting the widows and children of veterans and of those who made the ultimate sacrifice. It was not long until the veterans of Greenwood and Woodstock organized a Post and then voted to have an Auxiliary.

It has become a custom countrywide for Auxiliary Units to honor their Posts each year with a dinner and gift on the Legion's anniversary. On many occasions the Jackson-Silver Unit's gift has been monetary to help the Post with some project. This year it was decided to find pictures of all the Past Post Commanders, have them mounted in new frames, hang them in the front of the hall and to unveil this gift at the birthday celebration.

This project was planned and executed by Past Unit President Leah Deegan. Starting with the first Commander, Charles Andrews, there have been 49 men who served in that office, some of them more than once. All but three of these now have their pictures on display. Two of the missing ones have now been located, leaving George Hudson, the second Commander, whose picture has not been found. If anyone knows where his picture could be obtained, please contact Leah Deegan or any member of the Post or Unit. The pictures of Harold Jackson and William Silver, for whom the Post was named, have a special place at the center and above the rest of the display.

Fannie Cummings, whose late husband, Alanson Cummings, was a Charter member of the Post, became an organizer and Charter member of the Auxiliary Unit, the only one still living. From the beginning she was an energetic supporter of legislation establishing programs for veterans and in promoting their causes in any way she could. Fifty years ago this June, at the State convention in Old Orchard, she was elected President of the Department of Maine, American Legion Auxiliary. She brought to Thursday's celebration scrapbooks and mementos of her 70-plus years of membership and service. During the evening she was presented gifts from Jackson-Silver Post and Unit, Mundt-Allen Post of Bethel and the Second District. Finally, Edward Roach, Jr. of Dixfield, officer of the Forty and Eight Voiture #613 presented her with Holiday Inn reservations for the June 1992 convention in Ellsworth, along with a check to cover her other expenses.

Each year the American Legion Auxiliary at the National level selects a country for study as part of its Foreign Relations Program. For 1991-92 that country is Czechoslovakia, made up of two semi-autonomous "republics", Czech in the west and Slovakia in the east.

They joined as the Republic of Czechoslovakia in 1918, then fell under Communist domination after World War II until 1990 when they elected a president and redrafted their constitution. There is now much unrest, threatening to sever the federation once more.

Jackson-Silver Unit was fortunate in being able to obtain some recipes for some typical Slovak dishes from Dorothy Kazimer of Lisbon Falls who is of Slovak descent and a Past President of District 3, American Legion Auxiliary. These dishes supplied the menu for the birthday celebration.

At the conclusion of the meal there were brief remarks by Jeri Greenwell of Bethel, State Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Mrs. Kazimer provided some insight into the use of so much dough and cabbage in the diets of Slovaks because it is filling and relatively cheap where the people are generally poor. The diners, now full, watched a video tape made by a teacher who went to Slovakia to study his roots and captured the beauty, architecture, history, customs and life of his mother's country on film.

The 60 people in attendance seemed to enjoy the evening and went back for seconds of the food which, for the most part, was unfamiliar. This was gratifying for the cooks who had not been sure of how to go about the preparation. Among those in attendance were several dignitaries. They were: Past Department Commander and Past National Vice Commander, Vito De Filippi of Rumford; Past Dept. Commander Edward Roach, Jr. of Dixfield; Dept. Chaplain, William Barr of Lisbon Falls; Past Department Presidents Fannie Cummings, Jeri Greenwell and Carolyn Barr; Ethel LaCourse, Second District President of Norway; Dorothy Bailey of Norway, Chaplain of Second District and Treasurer of County Council Auxiliary; Dorothy Kazimer, District 3 Past President.

In other recent Unit activities, two delegates and an alternate were named to attend Girls State at Husson college in June. They are Stacy House and Betsy Johnson of Woodstock. Shelby Cavalero, also of Woodstock is the alternate. Also at their March 5 meeting, members voted to donate $200 to Voices of the Blind and accepted the membership applications of Amber Leigh Cummings and Meaghan Faith Cummings, granddaughters of Past Unit President, Noreen Russo.

Several members attended the annual Oyster Stew and Birthday Supper on March 10 as guests of Mundt-Allen Post and Unit in Bethel.

On March 17 the Oxford County Council American Legion and Auxiliary were guests of Jackson-Silver Post and Unit for their monthly meeting and election of officers for the ensuing year. Olive Risko, secretary of the Unit was elected 1st Vice President of the County Council Auxiliary.

It was announced that there will be a flag-burning ceremony on May 30, so anyone who has a tattered or soiled flag which should be disposed of is advised to get it to Jackson-Silver Post before that date.

COMMUNITY CONCEPTS: APPLY NOW FOR FUEL HELP

Now is the time to apply for fuel assistance, according to Community Concepts' supportive services director Lynda Haegele.

Haegele said the federal Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program operated by Community Concepts is available to those with limited income through April 30.

The LIHEAP program pays fuel benefits averaging $250 statewide. Community Concepts has received approximately 7,800 applications since the annual program began in November, Haegele said.

A family of four must earn less than $1,390 per month or $16,750 annually to be eligible. Senior citizens and families with children under age two qualify under a higher income guideline.

A person over 60 years old living alone is eligible if monthly income is under $828 ($9,930 annual); an elderly couple can earn up to $1,100 per month ($13,200) and still be eligible.

"The recession has forced many families to consider fuel assistance for the first time in their lives," Haegele said. "There are a lot of working families that meet the income guidelines because their hours have been reduced."

"We are especially concerned that once the moratorium on electrical shut-offs ends on April 15, we will have a deluge of people call us after they receive an electrical shut-off notice at the end of April."

"We strongly encourage applications from people who are having a difficult time paying for their fuel bills," Haegele she said.

The initial application will also be used to determine eligibility for a number of other programs including weatherization, the Telephone Lifeline program, the CMP Lifeline program, and the Medicaid transportation program.

To set up an application for the LIHEAP program, call Community Concepts at 743-7716 in South Paris, 795-4065 in Auburn, and 364-3721 in Rumford.

united income through April 30. The LIHEAP program pays fuel benefits averaging $250 statewide. Community Concepts has received approximately 7,800 applications since the annual program began in November, Haegle said.

A family of four must earn less than $1,390 per month or $16,750 annually to be eligible. Senior citizens and families with children under age two qualify under a high-income guideline.

A person over 60 years old living alone is eligible if monthly income is under $828 ($9,930 annual); an elderly couple can earn up to $1,100 per month ($13,200) and still be eligible.

"The recession has forced many families to consider fuel assistance for the first time in their lives," Haegle said. "There are a lot of working families that meet the income guidelines because their hours have been reduced."

"We are especially concerned that since the moratorium on electrical shut-offs ends on April 15, we will have a deluge of people call us after they receive an electrical shut-off notice at the end of April."

"We strongly encourage applications from people who are having a difficult time paying for their fuel bills," Haegle said.

The initial application will also be used to determine eligibility for a number of other programs including weatherization, the Telephone Lifeline program, the CMP Lifeline program, and the Medicaid transportation program.

To set up an application for the LIHEAP program, call Community Concepts at 743-7716 in South Paris, 795-4065 in Auburn, and 364-721 in Rumford.

TROOP 565 NEWS

We have had a busy few weeks. On Saturday, Feb. 29 we had a Leap-year Snowshoe hike in South Bethel. Seven scouts, assistant scoutmaster Larry Bonney, and committee members Scot Annis braved frigid temperatures to hike and cook on the trail.

On Saturday, March 14, committee member Steve Wight invited us to his Cross-Country Ski Center for a day of skiing. Mr. Wight with ASMs Lloyd Sweetser, Sr. and Larry Bonney took 11 scouts out on the many trails. For some boys and leaders this was their first time on skis. Thanks again, Mr. Wight.

We also joined with Troop 580 of Rumford for an evening. They had guest speakers who had recently returned from a mountain climbing expedition on Annapurna in Nepal. This is the 10th highest mountain in the world. Very interesting. Thanks, 580.

On March 21, we participated in the annual Snowshoe District Bowlathon in Rumford. We raised money for the troop and had fun, too. Congratulations to Jen Jenson--top scorer for the troop.

The scouts have been working on a special project during their weekly meetings. We'll tell you more about that next time.

For more information about Scouting, call scoutmaster, Mark Wigley 836-3602.

AMY FORD

Amy Ford performs

Amy Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Ford of Bethel, played the role of Joan McKintosh in "Execution of Justice," the St. Michael's College theater department's major spring play.

Ford, a junior drama major took part in this multimedia production about the trial of Dan White, a former San Francisco supervisor and ex-policeman who shot and killed San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and fellow supervisor Harvey Milk, the nation's first openly gay elected politician. Out of this trial came the famous "Twinkie Defense" that helped White receive the most lenient sentence possible.

The play, which ran from March 25-29, mixed live theater with video and films. It raises important and difficult questions about the justice system and society.

If Your Bank Fails, Know the Tax Laws

This article is brought to you by Jane D. Gray, CPA

Bank failures are not a pleasant subject. But if you lose your savings because of one, it will help to know that the tax law gives you some breaks.

As a depositor in a failed financial institution (such as a bank, savings and loan, or credit union), you may claim your uninsured loss as a non-business bad debt in the year the loss is finally determined. For most people, a nonbusiness bad debt translates into a short-term capital loss, which can be used to offset capital gains. If your loss is larger than your capital gains, you may use up to $3,000 of your loss to reduce your other income. Any loss not used in the current year may be carried over to future years.

If you meet certain requirements, you may elect to treat your loss as a casualty loss or as an ordinary loss instead of claiming it as a bad debt. First, the bankrupt financial institution must have been state or federally chartered. Second, you cannot have been an officer of the failed institution, you cannot have owned 1% or more of its stock, and you cannot be closely related to an officer or owner of the institution. Third, you must be able to "reasonably estimate" the amount of the loss. If you meet these requirements, you may elect to deduct your uninsured loss as a "casualty." This type of loss is allowed only to the extent it exceeds $100 and 10% of your adjusted gross income. You must itemize your deductions to claim a casualty loss.

Alternatively, if none of your deposit was federally insured, you may elect to deduct your loss as an "ordinary loss," generally subject to a $20,000 ceiling ($10,000 in the case of a married individual filing separately).

Check your options with your tax advisor if you suffer a loss due to bank failure.
